General Education Diploma (GED)

The GED exam consists of four tests that measure high school level skills and knowledge. Students in the program work with a teacher in class to prepare for the exam, which can be taken at a certified testing center when the learner is ready. The student can take one subject test at a time and as many times as needed.

National External Diploma Program (NEDP)

Different from the GED program, the NEDP uses life and work experiences to demonstrate high school level skills and knowledge. Students complete the program based on their own schedule by studying independently and working with an assessor. Similar to the GED, the student can attempt to complete the exam activities as many times as needed.
