Internet and Computing Core (IC3) Certification is a globally accepted introductory college-level computer course used to demonstrate that one possesses the knowledge required for basic use of computer hardware, software, and the Internet which are prerequisites for virtually every mid-level IT job and other IT certification courses.

Qualifications for community residents: Must complete AoH registration application, have high school diploma or equivalent, pass NorthStar computer test and have minimum CASAS reading score of 240 or above. Students who successful complete this course will receive 3 college credits.